On the 11th, we saw the value of the dogs. We saw that there was nothing as effective as the dogs for searching wide areas, for clearing spaces. Their ability to recognize odors, respond to odors, to trace the source of an odor is phenomenal. The piece of the dog that adds to its extraordinary olfactory ability is the relationship with humans. Dogs and humans are so tightly connected. Some people describe it as we have co-evolved. It's a remarkable relationship, and the ability to work with them and to have them train and respond and work with us even in these situations where most normal animals would be fleeing from all of the smoke and the noise, and these dogs are still like, “Hey, this is my job. I'm having a great time because I'm here with my handler. And we're just out here doing fun things.” Even though it's not a fun environment, the actual working together for them is very positive and rewarding, and that's why they do it.
