SURVIVOR TREE SEEDLINGS INSPIRE HOPE AND RESILIENCE

Seedlings Are Donated to Parkland, Puerto Rico and London Communities Affected by Violence and Disaster

(New York) September 12, 2018 – Parkland, Fla., Puerto Rico and London will be honored with the offering of “Survivor Tree” seedlings, the National September 11 Memorial & Museum announced today. The communities have committed to nurturing these trees to serve as landmarks symbolizing resiliency and hope.

“This meaningful program reflects our commitment to help communities around the world overcome tragedy and begin to heal, just as New York City and the nation did in the aftermath of the 9/11 attacks,” Alice M. Greenwald, 9/11 Memorial & Museum President & CEO said. “We stand in solidarity with these communities and hope the Survivor Tree seedlings will inspire a spirit of strength and resilience in Parkland, London and Puerto Rico.”

The recipient communities have been impacted by violence and extreme disaster in the past year. In Parkland, a gunman killed 17 people, including students and staff members, at Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School. Following the tragic Grenfell Tower fire in London last year, the Grenfell community will accept a seedling in recognition of those who lost their lives, and on behalf of the bereaved, survivors and all those affected by the disaster.

In September 2017, Hurricane Maria caused destruction throughout Puerto Rico, leaving an estimated 2,975 people dead in the storm and its aftermath.

The Survivor Tree has become a symbol of the nation’s spirit of hope and healing as well as strength and resilience in the wake of the 2001 attacks. The tree got its name after it was nursed back to health when it was pulled from World Trade Center rubble. It was later replanted at the 9/11 Memorial.

In September 2013, the Memorial began the tree seedling distribution program in partnership with Stamford, Conn.-based Bartlett Tree Experts and John Bowne High School in the Flushing neighborhood of Queens.

Bartlett, which donates its resources to support the program, harvested seeds from the Survivor Tree in the fall of 2011. John Bowne High School cares for the seedlings as part of the school’s agriculture curriculum.
